Information

1 - Title: Spectre

Storyline

In Mexico City on the Day of the Dead, MI6 agent James Bond wreaks havoc foiling a terrorist bombing plot, follows the leader, Marco Sciarra, onto his escaping helicopter, throws Sciarra and the pilot to their deaths and flies away, examining the stylised octopus on Sciarra's ring.

In London, Gareth Mallory, the current M, suspends Bond for his unauthorized action. M is engaged in a power struggle with Max Denbigh (whom Bond dubs "C"), the Director-General of the new, privately backed Joint Intelligence Service formed by the merger of MI5 and MI6. C campaigns for Britain to join the global surveillance and intelligence initiative "Nine Eyes," and close down the "outdated" '00' section. In private, Bond shows Eve Moneypenny a video delivered to him after the previous M's death, ordering him to kill Sciarra. Moneypenny agrees to help Bond secretly, as does Q.

Bond follows the previous M's orders, attending Sciarra's funeral in Rome. He saves Sciarra's widow, Lucia, from two assassins. They make love, and she tells him Sciarra belonged to a powerful and deadly international organisation. Bond uses Sciarra's ring to infiltrate a meeting. One piece of business is the assassination of the "Pale King." Suddenly, the leader, Franz Oberhauser, greets Bond, who flees across the city in the souped-up car he "borrowed" from Q, pursued by Hinx, Spectre's top assassin. Bond calls Moneypenny, who identifies the Pale King as Mr White, a former member of the organisation's subsidiary, Quantum, who had fallen afoul of Oberhauser—presumed dead 20 years earlier.

White is dying of thallium poisoning in Altaussee, Austria. Bond offers to protect his daughter, Madeleine Swann. White tells Bond she will take him to "L'Américain," and commits suicide. Bond finds Swann, a psychiatrist, who refuses to listen to him until Bond rescues her from Hinx and his forces. The pair meet Q, who identifies Le Chiffre, Dominic Greene and Raoul Silva as agents of the same organisation, headed by Oberhauser. Swann names it: Spectre.

Swann takes Bond to L'Américain, a hotel in Tangier, where a secret room directs them to Oberhauser's base in the Sahara. On a train to a remote station, Hinx attacks them. In the ensuing fight, Bond strangles and ejects him. At Oberhauser's base they learn that Spectre is behind the Joint Intelligence Service and the Nine Eyes programme. Oberhauser now has access to everything—including M's briefing of MI6. C is complicit. He will give Spectre unlimited access to intelligence gathered by Nine Eyes. Oberhauser boasts of the way their paths have crossed, asking Bond if he thought it was a coincidence that all the women in his life ended up dead. He plays a recording of Swann's father's suicide.

While Oberhauser probes Bond's brain, he discusses their shared history. After Bond was orphaned, Oberhauser's father, Hannes, became his temporary guardian. Jealous of his father's affection for Bond, Oberhauser killed his father, staged his own death, and adopted the name Ernst Stavro Blofeld. He went on to form Spectre and target Bond. Oberhauser removes a white cat that jumps onto Bond's lap.

Bond and Swann stun Blofeld using an explosive wristwatch. The entire complex burns, and they escape to London to prevent Nine Eyes from going online.

In London, Bond and Swann meet M, Q, Bill Tanner and Moneypenny, planning to arrest C. Swann and Bond are separately abducted by Spectre operatives. The rest proceeds with the plan. After Q stops Nine Eyes from going online, a struggle between M and C ends with C falling to his death. Bond is taken to the ruins of the old MI6 building, scheduled for demolition after Silva's bombing. Blofeld—the right side of his face badly scarred—tells Bond that he has three minutes to escape, or he can die trying to save Swann. Bond finds Swann and they escape by boat as the building collapses. Bond shoots down Blofeld's helicopter, which crashes onto Westminster Bridge. Blofeld manages to crawl away from the wreckage. He dares Bond to kill him, but Bond refuses, leaving him to be arrested by M. Bond reunites with Swann.

Later, Bond acquires his rebuilt Aston Martin DB5 from Q and drives away with Swann.

Cast

Daniel Craig as James Bond, agent 007. The director Sam Mendes has described Bond as being extremely focused in Spectre, likening his new-found dedication to hunting.

Christoph Waltz as Ernst Stavro Blofeld (born Franz Oberhauser), Bond's nemesis and the mysterious mastermind behind Spectre, as well as the puppeteer responsible for a series of recent events in Bond's life, motivated by a longstanding grudge against him.

Léa Seydoux as Madeleine Swann, a psychiatrist working at a private medical clinic in the Austrian Alps, and the daughter of Mr White.

Ben Whishaw as Q, MI6 quartermaster who outfits Bond with equipment for use in the field.

Naomie Harris as Eve Moneypenny, a former agent who left the field to become M's assistant.

Dave Bautista as Mr. Hinx, Spectre's top assassin.

Andrew Scott as C (Max Denbigh), head of the new joint intelligence service and an agent for Spectre, heavily involved with their plan to merge nine national intelligence agencies into the Nine Eyes Committee, allowing Spectre to have the power to take over the world.

Rory Kinnear as Bill Tanner, M's chief of staff.

Jesper Christensen as Mr. White, a fugitive from MI6 and a former senior figure in Spectre's Quantum subsidiary, as portrayed in Casino Royale and Quantum of Solace, now dying from thallium poisoning after falling from Spectre's favour over his reservations relating to human trafficking.

Monica Bellucci as Lucia Sciarra, the Italian wife of assassin Marco Sciarra.

Ralph Fiennes as M (Gareth Mallory), head of MI6.

Stephanie Sigman as Estrella, a Mexican agent who accompanies Bond on his mission to assassinate Marco Sciarra.

Alessandro Cremona as Marco Sciarra, an Italian Spectre agent whom Bond kills in the pre-title sequence of the movie.

Judi Dench as Mallory's predecessor M, who posthumously gives Bond his mission. This film marks Dench's eighth and final as appearance as M, 20 years after beginning with GoldenEye.
