Storyline

Overview: The Hunger Games: Mockingjay – Part 2 is a 2015 American dystopian science fiction war film directed by Francis Lawrence from a screenplay by Peter Craig and Danny Strong, based on the 2010 novel Mockingjay by Suzanne Collins. The sequel to The Hunger Games: Mockingjay – Part 1 (2014), it is the fourth and final main instalment in The Hunger Games film series.

After being attacked by a brainwashed Peeta Mellark, Katniss Everdeen recovers from her injuries in District 13. President Coin refuses to let Katniss go to the Capitol until they take District 2, the last district controlled by the Capitol. Katniss is sent to join the assault on the Capitol's armoury in District 2; although she is able to rally the rebels and convince District 2 to join the rebellion, she is shot by a civilian, but merely injured due to her bulletproof Mockingjay costume.

Johanna covers for Katniss while she sneaks on board a helicopter on its way to the Capitol. Coin becomes aware of Katniss' defiance but plays along. Katniss is recruited into the Star Squad, which includes Gale and a recently married Finnick. The whole squad is given suicide pills to take in case they are captured. Peeta, who is still not fully recovered, eventually joins them in the field to appear in the propaganda videos that the team is shooting in the wreckage of the city. Led by Boggs, the team makes their way to the Capitol, evading booby-trapped "pods" placed along the way with Boggs' holographic map. In setting up for a shot in a courtyard, Boggs is fatally wounded by a pod and bestows the map on Katniss, insisting that she keep going and warning her of Coin. The squad then triggers another pod, releasing a flood of lethal black tar. As they flee, Peeta momentarily succumbs to his conditioning and attacks Katniss, killing Mitchell in the process, but Katniss refuses to kill him.

The group are then trapped in a building by Peacekeepers. As they try to figure out their next steps, Katniss lies and says that Coin has sent her on a mission to assassinate President Snow. The other group members know this is a lie, but they back Katniss up nonetheless. The Leeg sisters stay behind in the building as a distraction so the group can escape the building. The Peacekeepers destroy the building and the Capitol broadcasts a video of the attack announcing Katniss' apparent death, which is interrupted by Coin, who delivers an impassioned eulogy for Katniss to rally the rebels. Realizing that everyone believing Katniss to be dead actually helps their cause, the team decides to continue to the mansion and assassinate Snow. The group travels into the sewers to move across the Capitol while avoiding pods, but surveillance footage alerts Snow that Katniss is actually alive. He orders the release of genetically engineered "mutts" into the sewers, who ambush and kill several members of the group, including Finnick. Katniss sets the holographic map to self-destruct and cause an explosion that kills the rest of the mutts. The team escapes the sewers and takes shelter in a nearby house owned by former Hunger Games stylist and Snow's cousin, Tigris.

Snow invites Capitol citizens to take shelter in his mansion, forming a human shield around it. After saying goodbye to Peeta, Katniss and Gale join the group of citizens in disguise in order to infiltrate the mansion. During this attempt, the rebels finally arrive at the Capitol and engage in a gunfight with the Peacekeepers, with several Capitol citizens being caught in the crossfire. The mansion gates remain closed to the Capitol citizens that arrive, and the children in the crowd are brought to the front so that they can enter first when they open. In the confusion, a hovercraft marked with Capitol insignia drops bombs into the crowd. When a group of medics, including Katniss' sister, Prim, arrive to treat the wounded, the second wave of bombings occurs, killing Prim and knocking Katniss unconscious.

Katniss awakens, and Haymitch informs her that the rebels have finally won the war. Katniss goes to face Snow in his greenhouse, where he is being held prisoner and awaiting execution. He explains to Katniss that Coin staged the bombing to turn his followers against him, and when she doesn't believe him, he reminds Katniss of their promise never to lie to one another. Katniss realizes Gale had suggested a similar strategy and confronts him. When Gale claims that he is not sure whose side the bombs came from, but that he cannot deny his part in Prim's death and regrets not being able to keep his promise of protecting her family, Katniss dismisses him.

Coin, now declaring herself the interim President of Panem, calls a meeting of the surviving Hunger Games victors. To end the violence of the rebellion, she calls for a vote for a final, symbolic Hunger Games using the children of Capitol leaders as revenge. Some of the tributes, including Peeta, are outraged, while others support the initiative. Katniss stays silent, and Coin asks her what she thinks after most of the tributes have cast their votes. After a moment, Katniss votes yes on the condition that she can execute Snow herself. After meeting Katniss' eyes, Haymitch casts the tie-breaking "yes" vote.

At Snow's execution, Katniss approaches Snow with her bow in hand. Overlooking them is Coin, and after a speech, Katniss shoots her dead instead. Snow begins to laugh, which causes a riot of citizens to converge on and kill him. Katniss then tries to swallow her suicide pill, but Peeta stops her, and she is arrested. In captivity, Haymitch brings Katniss a letter from Plutarch that he reads to her; the letter assures Katniss that she will be pardoned, there will be no "last Hunger Games," and she will be able to return to District 12. He doesn't tell her this in person because he feels that he cannot be seen with her as Panem begins to heal under the leadership of Commander Paylor. Katniss remarks that the only person who's ever actually won the Hunger Games is Plutarch.

Returning home to District 12, Katniss tries to pick up the pieces of her old life. Prim's cat returns to the house, and Katniss initially lashes out at the animal before breaking down into tears. One day, Katniss walks outside to find Peeta, who has almost fully recovered from his conditioning and returned home. They spend time together, sometimes with Haymitch, and receive a letter from Annie, Finnick's wife, telling them that they have had a son, that Katniss' mother is still treating survivors, and that Gale was promoted to Captain. Commander Paylor is formally elected the new President of Panem.

Several years later, Katniss and Peeta play with their children in a meadow. Their infant cries from a nightmare, and Katniss ponders that they will eventually learn her story and about her time in the Games. She muses to her baby that when she has a nightmare, she plays a game wherein she imagines every good thing that she has ever seen anyone do. She says that the games get tedious at times, but that "there are much worse games to play."
