

The Paragon Multimedia DVD, VHS Collection

Title: I Am Waiting No More

Library Image

ISBN:5060092900096

Information

Release Title: I Am Waiting No More 1973 (United Kingdom)

From:

AKA: Hurry Up, Or I'll Be 30

Release date: 1973

Origin: USA

Genre: Action, Adventure, Sci-Fi, Thriller

Disc Nos. - 1

Certification: 12

Duration: 1h 28m

Region Code:

Region: 2

Product Code:

MPN:

EAN:

UPC: 0844628090582

Languages: English,

Filming Locations:

Sound mix: Dolby Digital,

Colour: PAL

Aspect Ratio: 2.40:1 – 1.78:1 (original ratio)

Storyline

The film follows a Brooklyn man (John Lefkowitz) who begins to suffer a severe identity crisis as he is about to turn 30. As his birthday approaches, he is forced to come to terms with his lack of success — in business, in love, and in general. Desperate to make his life a success, he tries to commit himself to a serious relationship and do the things 30-year-olds are supposed to do based on the standards of society. Further information of this film is scarce however...

Let me just start by saying that this low budget film made in 1973 which is a comedy and is also a bit of seriousness about it as well is one of my most favourite chill out films as it has a very basic understandable theme about it as it is about a young man named George Trapani(played by John Lefkowitz in his only film role) who is about to turn 30 years old and he is the oldest of 2 sons to Mr trapani and Mrs Trapani and his younger brother Vince(played by Ronald Anton at age 26) is still living at home and comes to the realisation that maybe life has passed him by and he is afraid of that so he decides to go out on his own rather than hang about with his usual so called friends who are not really his friends Petey(played by a young Danny Devito at aged 28) and Tony(played by Steve Inwood aged 26) or be in a loveless relationship with Flo who works as a waitress(played by Maureen Byrnes at age 28) He goes on his own to a bar/nightclub and meets a movie producer who turns out to be a sleazy adult movie producer named Mark Lossier(played by Frank P Quinn who very surprisingly was born in 1912 which makes him 61 years old in this film and he looks the youngest 61 ever he does not look a day over 30) who George introduces himself to and they chat and George then attends one of his auditions and a young quite attractive Woman about 22 or 23 called Jackie(played by Linda De Coff in one of her few movie roles) then realises that she will have to take her clothes off and declines and walks out of the audition as George watches on embarrassed. later George goes to a cafe and he sits at a table and he looks up at the waitress and he realises it is Jackie from the audition and she does not who he is or what he is talking about so he thinks she just does not care and he orders a coffee and later when he is finished and she comes back he says that it was this one time he was at something like that and she say's what are you talking about and he say's the audition and then she knows who he is and brightens up and he asks her out eventually and she seems happy to go out with him. they go out on 3 or 4 dates and have a good time for a while then she just suddenly goes off him and that's all she wrote but it really is sad as that's the way things can be but they do this film in a fun way. [quoted by Amazon]

Cast

John Lefkowitz as George Trapani

Linda De Coff as Jackie Tice (as Linda DeCoff)

Ronald Anton as Vince Trapani

Maureen Byrnes as Flo

Danny DeVito as Petey Willow Shields as Primrose Everdeen

Paula Malcomson as Mrs. Everdeen

Parents Guide

Sex & Nudity

None

Violence & Gore

Moderate

Profanity

Mild

Alcohol, Drugs & Smoking

Mild

Fighting & Intense Scenes

Moderate

Further updated required

