Storyline

On a cargo ship, two workers open a container with toxic waste and die from fumes. The captain, knowing the cargo, disposes of their bodies. Meanwhile, Frank Martin, returning from Miami to the French Riviera, unsuccessfully fishes with Tarconi, who gets a call about a black Audi A8 that bypassed customs and police. In Odesa, Ukrainian Environmental Agency Minister Leonid Tomilenko receives a threat from corrupt Ecocorp official Jonas Johnson to resume negotiations.

That night, the Audi crashes into Frank's home, driven by Malcolm Manville, who Frank had declined a previous job from. Paramedics take Malcolm away, revealing a passenger who warns Frank not to take her. He realizes the metal bracelets on her and Malcolm will detonate if they stray from the car, but the ambulance explodes, killing Malcolm. Frank is knocked unconscious by Johnson's henchman, wakes up with an explosive bracelet, and is forced to drive Malcolm's passenger, Valentina, and a package to Budapest.

Ecocorp, after secretly dealing with Tomilenko to bring a ship full of toxic waste into the country, tells him to expect seven more ships. Tomilenko has one day to sign Ecocorp's agreement, so he sends agents to find Frank's destination via Malcolm's GPS. While Tarconi looks into Johnson's motives, Frank visits Otto. Johnson's men arrive, order them back, and Frank fights them off, but Otto can't disarm the explosive transmitter in the car.

Frank reaches Budapest, but one of Johnson's men steals the Audi with Valentina inside. Chasing them down by bicycle, Frank recovers the car, and Johnson redirects him to Bucharest. Pursued by Tomilenko's agents in a black Mercedes-Benz E-Class, Frank manoeuvres them off a cliff and realizes Valentina is the real package. Valentina is revealed to be Tomilenko's daughter, who was drugged in Eivissa and transported by Malcolm for Johnson to blackmail her father.

Johnson ambushes Frank and Valentina on a bridge in Odesa, with Valentina captured and her bracelet removed. Frank drives into a lake, and Johnson leaves him to die. Underwater, Frank inflates a plastic bag with air from the car's tires, surfacing where Tarconi and Ukrainian police rescue him. On a train with Valentina, Johnson gives Tomilenko fifteen minutes to sign the contract.

Frank jumps the Audi onto the train, killing Johnson's men, but Johnson is too far to reach. He uncouples the train cabs, leaving himself and Valentina on one train and Frank on another. Frank reaches the Audi, jumping into the next cab with Johnson and Valentina. They fight; Frank subdues Johnson, takes his key, attaches the bracelet instead, and reverses the Audi. The bracelet detonates, killing Johnson. Frank reunites with Valentina. Tomilenko learns Valentina is safe from Tarconi and tears up Ecocorp contracts as police raid the cargo ship. Frank and Tarconi go back to fishing in Marseilles with Valentina. Wiki

Toxic waste bubbles in a ship waiting permission to dock in Odessa. Frank Martin turns down a job in Marseilles, referring it to a pal. A short time later, the pal, wounded by gunfire, crashes his car into Frank's living room and dies, leaving a young woman in the back seat. The employer of the dead man shows up, forces Frank to take the job, snaps a bracelet on his wrist that will explode if Frank gets more than 75 feet from his car, and sends Frank on a journey east with the young woman and a trunk full of something. She's Valentina, nearly mute. Can Frank figure out what's going on, deliver the package, and escape alive? And what does the ship have to do with it? IMDb
