Storyline

When a British reporter was writing an expose about Black Ops operations Treadstone and Black Briar, and the ones responsible for them are concerned. And when Jason Bourne, former Treadstone operative got the file on Treadstone and Black Briar and gave it to Pamela Landy who then passed it to the media. When the men behind Treadstone and Black Briar learn of this, they're concerned how this will affect other ops they have. They decide it's best to shut down all ops and make sure make everyone involved disappears. They try to take out Aaron Cross who is part of another op called Outcome, but he manages to survive. He then seeks out Dr Marta Shearing who worked on him when he began. It seems part of the program is for all subjects to take medications but he has run out, which is why he seeks her. But someone tries to kill her. He saves her and she tells him, he should have stopped taking the medications long ago. They go to Manila so that she can help him. Later the men behind Outcome learn that Cross and Shearing are still alive. They try to get them.

Six weeks after Jason Bourne's escape from Russia after his pursuit with Kirill, Operation Outcome agent Aaron Cross is assigned a training exercise in the Alaskan wilderness as punishment for going AWOL. He must traverse the rugged terrain to find a remote cabin while being stalked by wolves. The cabin is operated by Number Three, another Outcome agent there as punishment. Cross lies and tells Number Three that he has lost his program medication dog tags containing "chems" that Outcome agents must take to maintain their mental and physical enhancements.

Colonel Eric Byer is tasked with containing the fallout from Pam Landy's exposure of Operations Treadstone and Blackbriar. He and his team find several videos of Treadstone and Outcome medical directors Albert Hirsch and Dan Hillcott being together posted online that could lead investigators to Operation Outcome. Byer orders Outcome to be completely shut down and all the agents and participating doctors killed to protect other clandestine programs.

Byer deploys an armed drone to eliminate Cross and Number Three in Alaska. Number Three is vaporized when a missile from the drone destroys the cabin, but Cross survives. He shoots down the drone with a rifle and removes a subdermal tracking implant on his hip. He traps an aggressive wolf and forces it to swallow his tracker. Another drone targets the tracker and kills the wolf, tricking everyone into believing that Cross was killed. At Sterisyn Morlanta, the pharmaceutical company supporting Outcome, researcher Dr. Donald Foite seemingly snaps and methodically shoots down Hillcott and his colleagues working on Outcome. After being cornered by guards, Foite shoots himself, leaving Dr Marta Shearing as the program's sole survivor.

Cross travels from Alaska to Chicago to recover a stashed car, money, and fake identification. Running low on chems and seeing news that his Outcome provider, Dr. Shearing, had survived the shooting, he drives across country to her home in Maryland. Meanwhile, Byer sends four D-Trac assassins disguised as federal agents to kill her and make it look like a suicide. Cross intervenes, kills the assassins, and burns down her house to cover their escape. Shearing tells Cross that the program previously used a virus to lock in his physical enhancements, eliminating his need for his physical chems. They plan to fly to the Philippines to obtain a live virus to lock in his mental enhancements since it was impossible to get more mental chems.

Cross and Shearing use false identities to fly to Manila, bluff their way into a pharmaceutical factory where Sterisyn Morlanta has a research lab, and infect Cross with the live virus. Meanwhile, Byer's team undertakes a massive operation in New York to track and find Shearing digitally: they find CCTV footage of her at JFK airport, determine her itinerary, discover that Cross is still alive and on her flight, and realize the duo's plan. Byer alerts the factory's security team, but Cross subdues the security guards, causes a panic on the factory floor, and they both escape in the commotion. Cross becomes incapacitated from the virus so Shearing hides him in an apartment to recover. Byer dispatches LARX#3, a chemically brainwashed super soldier, to kill them. The next morning, Cross recovers but the local police discover their hideout and they both narrowly escape. The police and the LARX agent chase them on motorcycle through the streets of Manila. They lose the police and Shearing kills the LARX agent, but Cross is shot and loses consciousness. She bribes a nearby boatman to help them escape Manila. Byer and his team, who lost their trail, raid the empty apartment for clues, only to find a "No More" message written on the mirror, with Cross' medication dog tags hanging on the side.

Back in New York, Blackbriar supervisor Noah Vosen lies to the Senate, stating that Blackbriar was created solely to track down Bourne, and that Deputy Director Pamela Landy committed treason by aiding Bourne and releasing top secret Treadstone files to the press. Meanwhile, Cross recovers from his bullet wounds on the boat out of Manila, where he and Shearing use a chart to determine where they should travel, safe for the moment.

Cast

Jeremy Renner as PFC Kenneth James Kitsom / Aaron Cross, agent Number Five of Operation Outcome. After being recruited into the program, he was enhanced both mentally and physically and must take chems daily to stay enhanced. He begins to question the program after accidentally killing civilians during a mission.
Rachel Weisz as Dr. Marta Shearing, a virologist who specializes in designing and maintaining the enhancements done to Outcome agents.
Edward Norton as Colonel Eric Byer, Director of the National Research Assay Group, a fictional government agency similar to DARPA. He oversees the development and operation of all the supersoldier programs and had a working history with Cross in Somalia.
Stacy Keach as Retired Navy Admiral Mark Turso in charge of Operation Outcome.
Dennis Boutsikaris as Terrence Ward, CEO of pharmaceutical company Sterisyn Morlanta. His company develops and tests the chems and viruses used to enhance supersoldiers.
Oscar Isaac as Number Three, an Outcome agent assigned to operate a remote CIA base in Alaska as punishment for falling in love during a mission.
Joan Allen as former CIA Deputy Director Pamela Landy. After exposing Operations Treadstone and Blackbriar to the media she is burned by the CIA. Her actions lead to the shutdown of Operation Outcome.
Albert Finney as Dr. Albert Hirsch, one of the men who designed the supersoldier programs for the government.
David Strathairn as Noah Vosen, the Director of Operation Blackbriar.
Scott Glenn as CIA Director Ezra Kramer.
Donna Murphy as Dita Mandy, who coordinates the crisis center for Col. Byer.
Michael Chernus as Arthur Ingram
Corey Stoll as Zev Vendel
Željko Ivanek as Dr. Donald Foite, a research doctor for Sterisyn Morlanta who works alongside Dr. Shearing.
